THE WINE:

The Aldama family was among the most prominent in Sanlúcar during the 19th century, with vast vineyard and stock holdings. In 1888 the first Conde de Aldama sealed his best botas with plaster to protect their value and to prevent their admixture with wines from grafted vines. The botas remained sealed until 1927, when the Aldama family, facing ruin, sold its stocks and entered monastic life. Until acquisition by Francisco Yuste in the 21st Century, only the natural ullage has been replaced.

A rare, authentic Palo Cortado, round and long on the palate with a special tang and aromatic minerality reflecting its maritime origins and aging environment.

THE WINERY:

Since 1991, Sanlúcar de Barrameda almacenista Francisco (Paco) Yuste has pursued the objective of producing Manzanilla up to its highest historic standards. Upon rescue and restoration of venerable, endangered soleras and bodegas in Sanlúcar's emblematic Barrio Alto and Barrio Bajo districts, classic Manzanillas and Sherries are produced.
